The Not Even Once campaign aims to communicate to the youth at their level. The campaign is twofold. The first stage of the campaign is to hold events that will attract the youth. The events create a platform where we can communicate to the youth about the dangers of substance abuse. People in general find a sense of belonging in various sub cultures. The youth is the same. They find a sense of belonging in sub-cultures like surfing, skateboarding and music. The Not Even Once campaign communicates to the youth by means of these sub-cultures, motivating them to live healthy lifestyles by partaking in alternative adrenaline fuelled activities without the addition of drugs. The second stage of the campaign comes into play after the events. Funds raised through the events go towards the Drug Education Agency to conduct ongoing drug awareness campaigns in schools situated in the respective communities hosting events. Effectively the Not Even Once events are for the hosting communities as the local Community Policing Forums select the specific schools to be awarded with annual drug awareness campaigns.
